

ABSTRACT

The invention relates to a method according to which the addition of a CDMA-coded signal and a conventionally modulated signal, preferably at intermediate frequencies, simplifies the demands with regard to the analog-to-digital converter and intermediate frequency editing since before decorrelation the CDMA signal can be lower than the background noise and is raised from said background noise (N_o) only by subsequent decorrelation.

卷之三